A Gift for Life

Our Mission

To support the Lexington 4Life Center which caters to seniors in Lafayette County and surrounding areas.

To advance the Center's mission to provide a pleasant place for seniors to gather and receive support services through grants that fund programs aimed at improving quality of life, promoting independence and addressing critical needs.

4 Core Services One Major Focus

Lexington Community

The Lexington 4Life Center includes the Margaret Gray Center, Lexington R-V Early Childhood Center, Early Childhood Professions and a community health center.

A fitness center and a rural health advocacy organization, called the Health Care Coalition (HCC) of Lafayette County, are also housed in this facility.

Collectively, these organizations touch just about every age group and every facet of life with a multi-generational appeal that's unique both locally and nationally.

The Center offers a pleasant environment for seniors to gather, dine, engage with the community, or receive support services.

The Childhood Center, affectionately referred to as Ali's Place, provides a safe, educational environment for young minds to learn and grow. An added benefit is that the older adults who visit the Center are able to engage with the preschool students. What transpires are smiles, laughter and a comradery that's simply priceless.

Early Childhood Professions, or Vo-Tech, enable high school students real world experience in early childhood education—skills that will positively impact their future career endeavors.

The Health Center offers underserved residents access to health care, dental care and other safety net services.

The fitness center offers a cadre of programs and equipment to provide a quality workout.

The HCC actively advocates for the health and wellness of Lafayette County and surrounding areas with support from a dynamic rural health care network made up of area health care providers and social service organizations.
